POLICEMAN MAY NOT RUN FOR PUBLIC OFFICE

Board Decides Wyatt Cannot be Policeman and Candidate for High Constable.

At the meeting of the Police Board last night, the most interesting thing was the action on the letter of Policeman Wyatt, who asked the board to specify his rights in the matter of his proposed candidacy for the office of high constable.

After fully considering the question, the board decided that no policeman could engage in politics, either as candidate or advocate, while holding the position of officer on the police force.

This decision tends either to force Mr. Wyatt to resign his place on the force, or to relinquish his purpose of standing for election to the position now held by Mr. E. C. Garrison.

Mr. Wyatt signified his intention some months ago of running for the office of high constable. He had figured upon the popularity gained in his activity in the gambling cases to go a long way toward carrying him successfully through the canvass. While not having made an active canvass up to this time, Mr. Wyatt's friends were fully cognizant of his proposed plans, and he has many adherents who wish him success to the extent of adding him every way in their power.

There are many of his friends, however, who think he may be of more service to the city by remaining on the force, where his work has been very effective.

Mr. Wyatt could not be seen last night in reference to the matter, and it is not known what his intentions may be. It was intimated last night that he would consult with his friends before deciding what steps to take.

GREAT THROG BURIAL OF REAGAN

Railroad Suspends Traffic and Runs Specials to Carry Funeral Party.

MANY STATES REPRESENTED

Business Suspended in Palestine and Streets Draped in Crepe.

(By Associated Press.)
PALESTINE, March 8.—The body of John H. Reagan was today laid to rest in the family vault at East Hill Cemetery. During the morning there was a driving rainstorm, which put the roads in impassable condition and prevented carriages from reaching the home, two miles from the city. General Manager Leroy Trice suspended all traffic on the International and Great Northern Railroad and ran special trains to bear the funeral party.

The casket was placed on one of these trains, which carried also the family and the principal mourners, while others followed later to the cemetery, where the trains were held until the conclusion of the ceremony. The floral offerings were profuse. The service at the home was conducted by Rev. H. O. Williams, D. D., of the Methodist Church, of which the dead man was a member; the Christian Church, where Mrs. Reagan is a member, and the Confederate veterans.

The Confederate veterans was amplified by Captain Allen, of John H. Reagan Camp, U. S. V., of Palestine, and there was a brief service for the Daughters of the Confederacy.

At the cemetery the Masonic fraternity conducted the ceremony, General Henry B. Stoddard, of Bryan, officiating.

In attendance at the grave were many of the distinguished men of Texas, including Governor Lanham and other State officials.

In the great throng, which braved the weather and stood in the sticky mud, were representatives from every State in the South, most of them being veterans of the Confederate army.

Business was suspended in Palestine, the big railroad shops and other factories being shut down, business houses closed and the streets draped in crepe.

During the hours of the funeral the bell of every church in the city tolled.

The South has produced few men with qualifications so high as his. He was a distinctively manifested in the life of John S. Mathes. He came of a family of thinkers and people given to research and investigation, and was in that respect the most distinguished of all of them.

Although reared on a farm, and his earliest education being devoted to agriculture, he developed in his youth a fondness for historical research.

He was perfectly familiar with every detail of the early history of his State. He was a natural depository for the detailed facts of history, and whatever entered his mind along this line was never forgotten. It was a great pleasure for him to remember names and dates, and he never forgot a fact. He seemed to absorb everything of value in the history of his State.
